JD Flaherty, Jr. Awarded OSU FABE Industry Contributor Award

April 27, 2015 – (Columbus, Ohio) – JD Flaherty, Jr., President of Construction Systems Inc., was honored with the Industry Contributor Award by The Ohio State University’s Dept. of Food, Agricultural and Biological Engineering (FABE) Industry and Professional Advisory Group (IPAG) at the department’s annual awards banquet on April 22, 2015.

Flaherty was honored for his support of the Construction Systems Management (CSM) program and students. Flaherty serves on the CSM Industry Advisory Council for The Ohio State University. His involvement has been instrumental in furthering the resource development and marketing of the program, creating scholarships, mentoring students, and supporting the CMS program’s recent ACCE accreditation.

Flaherty was also recently awarded the 2014 Pinnacle Award for Lifetime Achievement from the Associated General Contractors of Ohio (AGC) and the 2014 Cornerstone Award from the Builders Exchange of Central Ohio (BX). Flaherty is the first individual to receive both awards and only the fourth individual from the construction industry to be awarded the FABE IPAG Industry Contributor Award.

A past board president of the Associated General Contractors of Central Ohio and Associated General Contractors of Ohio, Flaherty currently serves as treasurer for both organizations. He led the effort to create the AGC Ohio Education Foundation in 1999 and is a donor to the foundation, which has awarded more than $250,000 in scholarships since its start. Flaherty continues to serve as the Scholarship Chairperson, and was instrumental in establishing the first endowed scholarship at The Ohio State University for the Construction Systems Management major on behalf of the Central Ohio Chapter of AGC.
